

COURT OF APPEALS HEARS FINAL PLEA FOR BECKER'S LIFE

Base Appeal on Lawyer's Assertion That Condemned Man Was "Framed-Up."

CAN TAKE NO ACTION.

Only Thing Judge Can Do Is to Lay Facts Before the Governor.

Attorneys for Charles Becker are making a last effort to-day to get the Court of Appeals to take judicial notice of the statement of Attorney Harford T. Marshall that "Bridgie" Webber told him that he, Jack Rose and Harry Vailon had "framed up" Becker to save themselves. The judges are in session at Albany preliminary to closing for the summer vacations, and Martin T. Manton left for Albany early to-day to make an effort to have the Court consider Marshall's statement.

Mr. Marshall submitted the statement by personal messenger to Chief Judge Bartlett. He received a reply yesterday, the nature of which he refused to divulge, but he turned it over to Mr. Manton to use as he saw fit. It is not known whether Judge Bartlett suggested the presentation of the statement to the entire Court, but it is believed that is the action decided on by Becker's lawyers.

If Mr. Manton succeeds in getting a hearing on the statement it will be a very unusual proceeding. The purpose for which the session was called was solely to hand down decisions, but by a personal appeal it is hoped the judges may be induced to take cognizance of the statement. It is said the only thing they can do, even if they decide to consider the matter, is to call it to the attention of Gov. Whitman with a recommendation as to what action might be taken because of it.

Mr. Manton was to have visited Becker with W. Bourke Cockran to-day, but this plan was changed at the last moment. A conference was arranged, however, between Becker and Mr. Cockran. If there was any likelihood of action by the Court of Appeals it was planned to have Mr.

Cockran proceed to Albany after leaving Becker at Sing Sing. Further talks with Mr. Cockran to-day he is said to be planning an appeal to the public, based on a frank statement of all he knows of the Rosenthal murder. He will assert his innocence and endeavor to point out the motive and others would have for slaying Rosenthal. When this statement has been placed before the public there is expected to follow an attack on the conduct of the prosecution and on the character and testimony of the witnesses against Becker.

Further appeals to United States Supreme Court Justice or to other Federal judges are not expected, as Becker's counsel believe the decision of Justice Hughes leaves them no hope of Federal interference. A conference was held on the advisability of applying for a writ of habeas corpus from a Federal Judge and it is likely this line of action will be abandoned.

CITY EMPLOYEE ENDS HIS LIFE WITH RAZOR

Inspector of Masonry Found in Bathroom of His Harlem Boarding House.

Robert J. Dougherty, forty years old, an inspector of masonry in the Department of Public Works, was found dying with his throat and left wrist cut in the bathroom of his home at No. 126 West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street at 6 A. M. to-day. A razor was on the floor. He died a short time after being taken to the Harlem Hospital.

For the past eight weeks Dougherty had boarded with Mr. and Mrs. Michael Murphy at the West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street address, and no one about the place had noticed that he appeared worried or despondent. He left no note explaining his act. He is believed to have relatives in New Brunswick, N. J.

ASKS $10,000 DAMAGES.

Declares Phone Company's "Climbing Blocks" Lured Child to Death.

Samuel J. Kelly to-day filed in the Bronx County Court a $10,000 suit against the New York Telephone Company, alleging the company was guilty of negligence by having linemen's climbing blocks on a pole down to within two feet of the sidewalk, which blocks served "as an enticement and allure" that caused children to climb the poles.

Robert F. Kelly, his ten-year-old son, was playing in front of No. 408 Jackson Avenue, the Bronx, on Oct. 7 last. His little brother began to climb a pole, and Robert went after him to pull him down. Robert caught his brother's ankle some ten feet above the sidewalk, lost the balance and fell, dying two days later.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW! How to Keep Well, Keep Strong and Keep a Perfect Figure, Told in a Series of Illustrated Lessons

To-Day's Illustrated Lesson Prescribes Proper Summer Wearing Apparel and Gives Leg Swinging Exercises Which Replace Fat With Muscle and Give 'Poise.'

Because of her perfect physical proportions, Pauline Furlong has been named the "American Venus." She is the author of "Beauty Culture at Home," and is an authority on all questions of woman's physical well-being. She will give a course of lessons to the women readers of The Evening World this summer on "How to Make Yourself Well and Strong and Preserve Your Figure."

LESSON XIII.

By Pauline Furlong.

What reforms, if any, should you make in your wardrobe while you are fighting the battle for health and a perfect figure?

The unhygienic dress of the modern woman is a point upon which the male physician and physical culture expert always lay great stress. They affirm that the loss of the primitive health and strength of the savage woman is largely due to civilized clothing.

THE ONLY TRUE BEAUTY IS THAT OF RADIANT HEALTH.

I am the last one to deny that women have often sacrificed their health on the altar of fashion and beauty (so called). There can, of course, be no true beauty that is not based on radiant health. Unquestionably there are still silly women who torture their defenseless bodies and risk invalidism or even death by wearing clothing that is too tight. But I believe that the number of these women is decreasing and that any woman to-day can follow the fashions at least approximately without interfering with her physical comfort and well-being.

Consider the modes of the moment and see if I am not right. The skirt of to-day is essentially hygienic. It is so short that it cannot possibly pick up germs and dirt from the sidewalk, to be carried later into the home, and it would seem to be designed especially for rainy weather. Its wearer is not troubled by the damp, muddy folds of cloth about the ankles.

Also the skirt of 1915 is wide enough so that a woman may walk in it, climb stairs, step into a street car or automobile, with no danger of tripping and falling. The excessively narrow skirt was undoubtedly responsible for a certain number of sprained and broken ankles.

There has been a slight effort this spring to revive the corset which pinches in the waist, but it is perfectly possible, as I said the other day, to purchase a model which, when adjusted, will make the wearer's waist measure exactly what it is in a state of nature.

BEST SUMMER GARS LIGHT IN WEIGHT AND COLOR.

Then take the matter of millinery. To begin with, there is great latitude in the various shapes. Nevertheless, the tendency is all toward the small hat, lightly trimmed. Almost any doctor will tell you that the heavy hat, which weighs two or three pounds, is bad for the hair, bad for the nerves, and a promoter of headaches. This summer any woman who is careful of her health will have little difficulty in finding light-weight millinery, yet many of the small hats, such as the Panama shapes, have sufficient brim to protect a delicate skin from the too direct rays of the noonday sun.

As far as texture and general construction goes, it seems perfectly obvious to me that the clothes women are wearing this summer reach a higher level of hygienic excellence than those worn by men. Think of the suits most frequently worn by the latter—of wool or part wool and of black or some other sombre hue! It has been proved that black and dark blue clothing cause the body to feel the heat of the sun to a much greater degree than does white.

Many men wear both coats and vests during the summer, as well as high, stiff linen collars and hats of heavy straw. Women, on the contrary, go about in white or light colored dresses, of thin cotton or linen stuff. No coat is worn with these costumes, and they are frequently elbow-sleeved and carelessly draped. The air is allowed free access to the body, and there is interference with the latter's normal evaporation through perspiration.

Woman's fondness during the warm weather for white shoes is distinctly hygienic, since white absorbs less of the sun's heat than any other color. Speaking of shoes, I suppose I ought to mention the quarrel about high heels. My personal opinion is that a moderately high heel is not unhealthy, provided it is attached to a shoe that fits the foot and provides the wearer knows how to stand properly, bearing the weight on the balls of the feet and balancing from them.

SUMMER FUR A SOURCE OF "SUMMER COLDS."

Of course the white fur pad is a silly one, and is likely to induce that disagreeable ailment, the "summer cold," because the skin at the back of the neck is made unduly sensitive to every vagrant breeze. But for the moment, at least, I can think of no other really unhygienic fashion for women this season.

Therefore it seems to me that the stout woman who wants to reduce need make very few changes in her wardrobe. Above all things, however, she should get rid of any extremely tight clothing she may possess—any clothing of this sort, not merely corsets, I am speaking from an aesthetic as well as a hygienic point of view.

A discovery I have made about summer underwear may be interesting to my women readers. I fancy many of you have sighed over the fact that you cannot afford to wear "cool silk" next to your skin during the hot months. As a matter of fact, cotton underwear is cooler than silk. The latter, because of its close weave and its tendency to retain moisture with the body's perspiration, actually makes the wearer hotter, after a little, than does a coarser and cheaper cotton garment. Which should be a consolation to those of us whose pocketbooks are not too well filled.

MORE LEG SWINGING EXERCISES WHICH MAKE "POISE."

The exercises which I am prescribing to you to-day is not too easy, although you should have been prepared for it, in a degree, by the leg circling exercise of which I told you during the first week and by the stationary running, supported by a wand, which we tried for the first time yesterday. Both these movements tended to make the hip joint pivot more easily.

For leg swinging you will need a straight backed chair and a small footstool. Assume the correct standing position, chest forward, shoulders back, abdomen in, resting one hand on the chairback and the other on the hip to help preserve your balance. Then swing briskly to and fro the leg furthest away from the chair, keeping the instep straight and the toe pointed downward as in dancing. The footstool will make this last possible.

As long as the movement is kept up the leg should be swung without pause. But it is never wise to carry on any exercise to the point of exhaustion and on the first few days that you practise this one you may swing each leg only a few times. It of course is necessary to turn around when you change legs, so that the one in action may be always furthest from the chair.

At the end of each series of swings there should be two or three longer ones—higher kicks, so to speak—as illustrated in photograph No. 2. At first you probably cannot lift your leg as high as this, but with practice you should be able to raise it to the level of the top of the chair.

When your hip joints have become supple and your leg muscles well developed and controlled, thrust the chair aside and take the exercise with your hands on your hips. It will greatly increase your poise, and from the very beginning it will tend to reduce your hips and the upper part of your legs by substituting muscle for fat. Breathe deeply and smoothly during the exercise, and you will practice reach the point where you are able to perform it sixteen times in succession with each leg.

Readers of Miss Furlong's articles who are keeping measurement charts or otherwise following her lessons are invited to write to her, in care of The Evening World, asking any questions pertinent to the lessons or requesting information that will aid them in following her rules for diet and exercise.

Letters from Evening World Readers Following Miss Furlong's Lessons.

E. M. R. asks: Will you please publish the diet for obesity? The diet was printed in The Evening World June 29 and July 3.

M. F. writes: How can I reduce an obese abdomen without starving myself? Follow the diet published and practice the bending and swaying exercises. Always eat a little less than you desire.

MRS. C. N. P. asks: Will lemon and water reduce me? No liquids will reduce you, so take as little as possible. The lemon water is given to quench the thirst.

MRS. H. W. P. writes: It seems as if I can think of nothing to eat that does not make me stout. Can you help me? Eat sparingly of the diet given and you will surely reduce weight.

E. K. R. asks: How can I reduce my leg from the knee to ankle? Raise on the toes fifty times a day. Keep hands on hips meanwhile.

MRS. H. RIEHL asks: Will salt water baths reduce me? I go in the ocean every day. I hardly think the cold baths will reduce fat flesh, but the exercise will benefit you.

S. K. asks: What special exercise will reduce a very heavy bust and upper arms? Apply Turkish towels wrung out of hot water to open the pores and then rub with alcohol gently. Raising the arms above the head with wand will reduce shoulders.

ROW IN JERSEY SCHOOL.

Vice President Resigns to Keep Vote, and Then Learns He's Wrong.

(Special to The Evening World.) HACKENSACK, N. J., July 12.—The meeting of the Hackensack Board of Education ended abruptly at midnight this morning, when Vice President James W. Loveland, who was in the chair, resigned that office and refused to preside further. This was the culmination of a series of resolutions offered by Paul Pratt, intended to curtail the authority of Dr. W. E. Stark, supervising principal. Mr. Pratt explained that "Dr. Stark has been asked to resign, but refuses, and four of us intend to hamper his influence in every way possible."

The vote on all the resolutions was four to three in favor, because Vice President Loveland did not know he could vote and cause a tie. "I resign because I don't care to lose my vote on this important matter," he remarked. The rules were read to him after he left the chair and he was further chastised.

Dr. Stark's opponents insist he is more of a statistician than a supervisor.

CHINESE GIRL A BRIDE.

Travelled Across Continent to Marry New York Chinaman.

The marriage of Lee Chow, twenty-nine, and Lee Yok, twenty, was the culmination of a Chinese romance begun over four years ago in San Francisco. Chow, who is a merchant at No. 19 Mott Street, and lives at No. 33 Mott Street, came to New York three years ago, but not, however, until he had a promise from the little Chinese girl that she would come here when he sent for her and become his wife.

Lee Yok lived at No. 140 Waverly Place, San Francisco, where she was a belle among her countrymen. She came to New York three months ago. The marriage, performed at No. 33 Mott Street at noon yesterday by Rev. Lee T. H. of a Chinese Christian mission in Chinatown, was a quiet one, the usual elaborate Chinese celebration being contrary to Chow's religious beliefs.

Farmers Charged With Treason. VANCOUVER, B. C., July 13.—Two farmers, Ernest Nadel and David Kitzel, have been arrested here on a charge of high treason. They are German born, but have lived in Canada for more than thirty years.

It is alleged that in April they assisted a New German named Koppel and secured to escape from British Columbia across the boundary into the United States and to Germany.

GOATS GOT GOATS OF MOUNTED COPS IN LIVELY ROUNDUP

100 Nannies Ate Way Out of Barn and Scattered Over Brooklyn.

OWNER IS IN A CELL.

Police Use Lassoos and Corral Invading Army to Save Precious Gardens.

"Ki-ya."

This was the battle cry of Mounted Policemen James Doody, ex-cowboy, as he rode his fiery steed up and down and across the placid confines of Gravesend to-day, twirling his lasso above his head and ever and anon lassoing a goat. Other mounted policemen assisted him in lassoing and otherwise overcoming goats, but none of them could zip out "Ki-ya" with the penetrating efficiency of James Doody, he having acquired said efficiency on the boundless plains in the Southwestern part of our well known country.

It fell to the lot to-day of James Doody and his associate centaurs of the Sheephead Bay Police Precinct to mingle in the greatest round-up of goats in the history of Brooklyn. But to get down to the action in the tale we must go back to James Murdoch of West Fifth Street and Avenue U. James Murdoch has been for a long time addicted to the habit of rearing goats. Time and again his neighbors complained of the near-fragrance and plaintive sounds emanating from a barn on Murdoch's place and time and again he was fined a small sum in Coney Island Police Court. But he persisted in his favorite industry until yesterday, when he was fined $100 in Coney Island Police Court, with the alternative of spending 40 days in jail.

Murdoch elected to go to jail and he went, leaving 65 goats of indiscriminate ages and amiable locked up in his barn, practically without any guardship or protection whatsoever. He had lived alone and none of his neighbors thought it necessary to investigate the pleadings of the goats which resounded throughout Gravesend the whole night long.

With the coming of daylight the goats, having devoured all the interior fittings of the barn, simply walked right out through the wall on one side and permeated the entire neighborhood in every way possible for a goat to permeate. Aged billy-goats with long whiskers and cute little goatlets and nannygoats that would have been sedate had they not been so hungry glimpsed the lawns and garden plots of Gravesend and went to them.

With ha-a-a-a and bleats of joy the goats proceeded on their work of devastation. The residents were powerless. Many who sought to prevent the invasion of their premises were butted all over the place. Finally, in answer to numerous appeals, Lieut. McCarthy sent out six mounted policemen under the leadership of ex-cowboy Doody to round up the invaders.

At noon there were forty-two goats in the barn of the Sheephead Bay station, and Doody, with his "Ki-ya" and his no less valorous but less vocal assistants, were scattering out toward Sheephead Bay, Flatbush, Bensonhurst and Bay Ridge in search of the most nimble and adventurous of the flock. Some of the goats that ventured into the Italian district along New Utrecht Avenue will never be seen again, but the rest will all be assembled before night.

Lieut. McCarthy is open to suggestions as to methods of chaparroning fifty or upward assorted goats.

Heavens Bane Lake Inlet.

ALBANY, July 13.—Beavers have dammed the inlet of Spectacle Lake in the Adirondacks, causing the water to fall more than two feet. The Conservation Commission here to-day permitted complaints to destroy the dam and clear the channel. Camps and lodges about the lake belonging to wealthy summerers were affected by the water's low level.

Show Girl Was Nightmare. Ida Magalla, twenty-two, a show girl, was sleeping near the window of the second floor of her home at No. 373 West Thirty-eighth Street, early to-day when she had a nightmare. Still asleep, the girl arose and backed into the open window, falling to the courtyard below. She was rushed to Bellevue suffering from a possible fracture of the skull.

Nostrils Clogged? Dropping in Throat? Going Deaf?

SOME FACTS ABOUT LOW FEES

When the first cut-rate drug store was opened the other druggists tried to convince their customers that the cut-rate drug store sold inferior drugs, and warned them against dealing with such. The people soon found that the drugs were just as good in the cut-rate drug stores as in the drug stores that charged the high prices. It was not long before the cut-rate stores were doing the bulk of the business. The cut-rate drug stores sold on small profits and advertised. The other drug stores charged high prices and did not advertise.

When I placed my fees low and advertised the fact, it became the custom of other doctors to say all the mean things they could about my practice and warn people against being treated by me. The people quickly found that any remedy was as good as the other specialists and the fees were about one-third what the high-priced specialists charged.

The great number of people I treat makes it possible for me to make a small profit on my practice. I am perfectly satisfied with this small profit at this time, when every doctor must be made to serve the purpose that two dollars served before the great war began.
